PURPOSE

Mali is facing multiple crises, including insecurity in the center and north, with strong regional ramifications (especially in Liptako Gourma), inter-communal conflicts, socio-political instability, climate change, the protracted effects of the COVID-19 pandemic and the impact of the crisis in Ukraine, affecting 12.9 million people. The humanitarian situation has deteriorated. 7.5 million people need a humanitarian assistance, including 3.9 million women, 5.1 million children and 1.1 million people with disabilities. Hostilities often result in grave violations of child rights including killing, maiming, recruitment and use by armed groups, as well as gender-based violence. Across the country, 1.6 million children need protection. Attacks and threats by armed groups on education infrastructure, initially limited to the central and northern regions, have now expanded to the south of the country, affecting 1,766 schools, 500,000 children and 10,000 teachers across insecure regions. In the northern and central regions, more than 96 per cent of IDPs live in areas where access to water is below the national average. Mali also has one of the highest mortality rates due to unsafe water, sanitation, and hygiene (WASH) in Africa.

Global acute malnutrition prevalence exceeds 10 per cent in several areas; more than 275,665 children under 5 years of age are suffering from severe acute malnutrition; and food insecurity affects 3.6 million people. The country faces recurrent disease outbreaks, including measles and polio. In Mali, 4.3 million people need access to basic health services. Increasing constraints on humanitarian access are a major concern, especially in areas lacking basic social services and infrastructure.

The central regions of Mopti, Bandiagara, Douentza, Segou and San continue to be marked by a multifaceted crisis affecting people's livelihoods. Multiple attacks on villages and infrastructure, particularly schools, hostilities between armed actors, natural disasters such as floods have led to new displacements of populations within regions. According to the displacement tracking matrix (DTM) of May 2024, there were 111,577 internally displaced persons in the regions of Mopti, Bandiagara, Douentza (a decrease of 25,723 compared to December 2023 situation), and 54,681 in the regions of Segou and San (an increase of 6947 compared to December 2023 situation). Concurrently, the number of refugees, mainly from Burkina Faso, surged from 210,000 in December 2023 to 288,500 by May 2024. Many sought refuges in project-targeted locations like Koro and Douentza. Moreover, recent Nutrition SMART surveys conducted in June 2024 highlighted deteriorating conditions in several areas, particularly in those targeted by projects, where critical levels of acute malnutrition have surpassed emergency thresholds, putting thousands of children at risk of death. The persistent rise in insecurity further exacerbates the living conditions of vulnerable populations, compounded by limited access to essential social services, including health care, and compounded by climate-related hazards. Humanitarian access remains a major challenge for the implementation of the response to populations in need because of multiple attacks, kidnappings and risks related to the presence of explosive devices. To address these issues, the humanitarian actors are working under the clusters' umbrella and sectorial groups, under the leadership of the government, to improve coordination and synergies, and to find solutions to the challenges encountered and set targets for responding appropriately to the humanitarian needs of the populations.

Considering the increasing humanitarian crisis and needs that the country continues to face including the humanitarian consequences of the COVID-19 pandemics and the wider geographical coverage of the new country programme into high-risks regions, to ensure the delivery of timely, efficient, and high-quality responses to crises and to strengthen the emergency coordination mechanisms, there is a need to maintain a consistent Emergency unit staffing in Mopti sub-national office.

UNICEF, as lead of the WASH, education and nutrition clusters and the child protection area of responsibility is ensuring an integrated and coordinated response while strengthening conflict-sensitive, gender-responsive and child-centered dimensions through its Mopti sub-national office.
